RSI Project Committees

RSI's goals are accomplished through the work of its project committees which serve the RSI membership in a variety of areas. Our committees encompass the diverse nature of the supply industry and provide members with an opportunity to get involved by supporting and advancing railway supply industry goals in both the public and private sector. They also provide networking and professional development opportunities within the industry.

The RSI project committees include: the American Railway Car Institute Committee, Equipment Leasing Committee, Quality Assurance Committee, Standard Coupler Manufacturers Committee, State Taxation Committee, Committee on Tank Car, and Washington Affairs Committee. Specific details for each RSI committee can be found on our website. Some RSI committees are restricted to companies that manufacture certain products. If you would like to join a committee please contact Amanda Patrick at 202-347-4664 or patrick@railwaysupply.org.

RSI Membership Classification

Dues are based on the member company's global railway products and services for rail transportation use or global sales to rail suppliers for rail transportation use. The membership category is selected by the member company based on gross sales to rail transportation or to other suppliers for rail transportation use during the immediate preceding calendar year (ex. if your rail sales/service revenue last year was $15 million, you belong to class II-A and pay $6,000.00 in dues for 2011).

Important: A member company's wholly owned divisions or subsidiaries may be included under the principal company's membership providing that the individual wholly owned divisions or subsidiaries total gross rail sales/service revenue is considered when figuring 2010 RSI dues.

RSI is a not-for-profit incorporated trade association under S501 (c) of the Internal Revenue Code. Hence, dues are not deductible as a charitable contribution; but that percentage of your dues not allocated to federal and state lobbying is deductible as a normal business expense. You will be advised of the non-deductible percentage when your dues payment is received.
